Our climate is changing rapidly. We are seeing major shifts in technology and in the make-up of our population. ENTREPS AWARD: REDUCED INEQUALITIES, CHAPTER 10

With this award we want to honor policies, projects, initiatives, institutions, start-ups and in very exceptional occasions, individuals, whose performance towards achieving the goals of this chapter should receive recognition.

A prime example of a project we find commendable regarding the tenth UN Sustainable Development Goal -Reducing Inequalities- is the Kulera REDD+ Program for Co-Managed Protected Areas in Malawi, which provides critical resources for communities to protect their forests through improved climate smart agriculture and sustainable land use planned by the communities themselves, improving livelihoods by managing natural resources as an asset base to capture long-term economic benefits¹. If you know any project, initiative or policy deserving the Award on this particular category, reach them out to apply now.

Therefore, Entreprs appreciates the active work of those who have a significant impact in the implementation of these targets, which include the Sustainable Development Goals, established in 2015 by the United Nations, as well as more objectives which contribute to a more sustainable world. This is why the role of the Global Jurors specialists able to highlight the projects that they believe deserve to be recognized, is crucial.

Being a Global Juror just takes an hour per year from you, giving you private access to an online platform to nominate and vote, plus preferential access to the Congress and Awards Gala.

THE IMPORTANCE OF REDUCING INEQUALITIES IN TODAY'S SOCIETIES

According to the United Nations, the international community has made significant strides towards lifting people out of poverty. The most vulnerable nations – the least developed countries, the landlocked developing countries and the small island developing states – continue to make inroads into poverty reduction. However, inequality persists and large disparities remain regarding access to health and education services and other assets.

There is growing consensus that economic growth is not sufficient to reduce poverty if it is not inclusive and if it does not involve the three dimensions of sustainable development – economic, social and environmental. Fortunately, income inequality has been reduced both between and within countries. At the current time, the per capita income of 60 out of 94 countries with data has risen more rapidly than the national average. There has been some progress regarding creating favorable access conditions for exports from least developing countries as well.

To reduce inequality, policies should be universal in principle, paying attention to the needs of disadvantaged and marginalized populations. There needs to be an increase in duty-free treatment and continuation of favoring exports from developing countries, in addition to increasing the share of developing countries' vote within the IMF. Finally, innovations in technology can help reduce the cost of transferring money for migrant workers. In order to achieve these objectives, seven main targets have been added to the Sustainable Development Goals agenda set in 2015².
